ACIS National Meeting at University College Galway 5-10 July 1992

Members will receive the program and registration materials in early January. Thus far the planning has proceeded as follows. The program committee received over 300 proposals from ACIS and CAIS members, and the resulting program is rich and varied. One special session on The Field Day Anthology will feature Edna Longley, Colm Toibin, and several Field Day editors. Local organizers Nicholas Canny, Gearoid O Tuathaigh, and Seamus O'Grady have put together a stimulating week-long program of cultural and social events. Plenary addresses will be given by Irish President Mary Robinson, former Prime Minister Garrett Fitzgerald, and Terry Eagleton. John McGahern will read from his works. Several other distinguished writers, including Jennifer Johnston and Michael Davitt, have also been invited. There will be a pre-conference tour to the Aran Islands on 5 July, a tour through the Burren and Clare on 7 July, and a tour of Connemara on 9 July. Evening events will include receptions and musical and theatrical programs. Reasonable accommodations will be available to conference participants at Corrib Village on the UCG campus.

Flight Information. Jim MacKillop reports that Ward Travel Agency of New York, in conjunction with Aer Lingus (which serves New York, Boston, and Chicago), has agreed to offer ACIS and CAIS members special fares to attend the Galway conference. The fare will be lower than the "non-refundable" and lower than the generally-available sale fare to be announced some time in late November. Unfortunately, neither the sale fare nor the ACIS & CAIS fares were available when the Newsletter went to press. For information call Ward Travel (800) 251-6161 (outside New York) or (212) 262-5151 or (718) 651-6161.

Anne Marie Countie, completing a Master's Degree at Harvard Univ., writes to solicit information related to the Celtic festival of BEALTAINE (1 May). Of particular interest would be folklore examples of traditions and celebrations associated with this festival, especially from Ireland but also from other Celtic traditions. Also very helpful would be information on resources or contacts located in Ireland. Countie can be reached at 1 Oxford St. #123, Cambridge, MA 02138.

The Canadian Journal of Irish Studies has devoted its July 1991 issue to John McGahern with essays by McGahern, Denis Sampson, and others.

The Zurich James Joyce Foundation announces continuation of its Charles Peake workshop series, featuring an informal one week gathering in August for close scrutiny of aspects of Joyce's canon. A Foundation scholarship is also available to help support longer periods of study. For further information write Fritz Senn, Zurich James Joyce Foundation, Augustinergasse 9, CH-8001 Zurich, Switzerland.

From the Editors

If you move, to insure uninterrupted receipt of your Newsletter and ILS, send change of address to the ACIS Treasurer, Jim MacKillop. We are also grateful to Sid Poger for pointing out that the upcoming Galway conference is not the first joint ACIS/CAIS effort but rather occurs a decade after a Vermont meeting co-sponsored by the two organizations.

IN MEMORIAM

Noted scholar Barbara Hayley died in an automobile accident in Ireland in May. Hayley's several books on William Carleton made her a major figure in Anglo-Irish Studies. She was Chair of the English Department at St. Patrick's College, Maynooth, and had served as secretary and vice-president of the International Association for the Study of Anglo-Irish Literature.
